Ministry of ICT Affirms Crawford Capital's Role in Supporting South Sudan's Digital Transformation

The Ministry of Information, Communication Technology and Postal Services (MICT&PS) of the Republic of South Sudan affirms its official engagement with Crawford Capital Ltd. in supporting the development and research of electronic government services (e-services) in South Sudan.

This engagement forms part of the Government's broader digital transformation agenda aimed at improving efficiency, transparency, accountability, and accessibility in public service delivery.

The Ministry confirms that the engagement is grounded in established institutional procedures and aligns with government-approved reform priorities and resolutions of the Council of Ministers.

Crawford Capital is providing technical and research support to help strengthen digital workflows, improve administrative coordination, and contribute to the development of citizen-centred e-services tailored to the South Sudan context.

The Ministry emphasises that digital transformation is a key governance reform initiative intended to modernise public administration, improve service delivery, and strengthen institutional effectiveness across government.

The Ministry of ICT appreciates Crawford Capital's professional engagement and technical contribution toward advancing South Sudan's digital transformation objectives.

The Ministry remains committed to transparent implementation and the continued advancement of digital services that support a modern, efficient, and accessible government.
